How to Build a Chicken Coop That Will Last

Learn How To Build A Chicken Coop

Before starting to build the coop, you need to make sure the land you want to build on is level and landscaped properly. You have two options here, you can either landscape an area of land that you really want to build the chicken coop on or you can look for a piece of land that will already work well to build on without having to landscape at all.

The latter option is going to be cheaper than the former, but again this will come down to your personal preference.

By doing this first though, you'll build a chicken coop that lasts for a longer period of time since it'll have a more sturdy foundation that you built it upon.

Spend Money On The Base Structure

Next, one area that you will want to invest a little more on is the structural base. In the building plans in the book you'll see exactly what types of materials are going to be best for this so it makes the decision easy.

Choosing to forgo and opt for very cheap building materials here could come back to haunt you in the long run. There are still definitely cheap options that you can certainly consider and that will work well, but there still are limits. Knowing which cost-effective materials stand the test of time will help.

Make Good Use of Windows

Windows are a critical element within the chicken coop because they are going to allow for enough light so your chickens continue to lay eggs as they should. When they are not getting enough light, that's when you're more likely to run into problems, so making use of windows in the coop not only helps ensure the chickens stay happy over the long haul, but can also reduce your building costs if you're using proper materials.

It's important that you consider the structural design with the windows though because placing them in the wrong position on the coop could cause the walls to be less sturdy, so again, having a proper plan to guide you is critical.

Choose Your Feeders Wisely

Finally, you should choose your feeder position wisely. When the feeders are at an incorrect height level the chickens will either not be able to get to their food comfortably, or they may start to scatter the food all around the floor.

When that happens they're bound to start picking at the floor and potentially other areas of the house, which could lead to damage over time.

By taking the time to properly plan your chicken coop so it lasts over the years you will prevent yourself from having to spend more money down the road fixing up issues that you come into.

Next up we will look at how to protect your chickens, so that's one newsletter you don't want to miss. Considering a predator could easily take out your entire coop it's something you must protect yourself from.

The Hickory Falls is another design with great spaces. A pergola covered courtyard accents the entry, the master suite has a private patio with fireplace, and there is a lovely nook with a view of the yard.

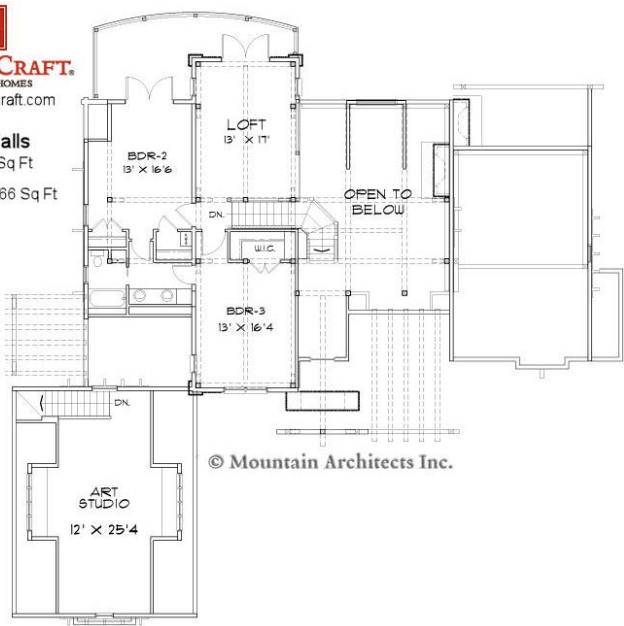

Design Features:

- Hybrid design of milled log & timber frame elements
- Master Suite with outdoor fireplace
- Custom, timber frame entry truss
